BEETHOVEN
Sonata No. 21 in C major, Op. 53 "Waldstein" (25')

The first programme opens with Bach's stately 'Chaconne', transcribed by Brahms from the violin original to be played at the piano by the left hand alone. This is followed by the incomparable lyricism of Mendelssohn's Songs Without Words and Schubert's serene and understated Sonata in A major. The second half is composed of dances. Firstly we hear Mozart's set of variations on C. Fischer's graceful Minuet, then the mystical and ritualistic Gnossiennes by Satie. The Gnossiennes were named after Knossos on Crete, home of the Minotaur, but from here we move to Argentina with Ginastera's vigorous and ebullient dances, based on the folk music of his homeland.

The second programme is framed by Bach's Italian Concerto and Beethoven's 'Waldstein' sonata, both of which use polyphonic textures to strikingly different effect. Lipatti's Sonatine and Scriabin's Prelude and Nocturne are charming and appealing examples of works for the left hand alone, whereas Debussy's Images transport us to a kaleidoscopic world of rippling reflections, music of the past, and the frenetic moto perpetuo of the final movement. A selection of Chopin's Études in the second half present an alternative, though equally inspired, approach to the pianistic virtuosity exploited with such élan in the Beethoven.

"... In Ravel's Tombeau de Couperin, the pianist was likewise in full expressive command of her fingers, conveying the swirling shimmer and sweet melancholy of a work that veers between elegance and emotion. Two pieces of Satie and two of Albéniz were exquisitely played..."
